Development Roadmap

IQ TechMax team has a unique way of taking out the project from the client's requirements to bringing out their expectations in a way that several revisions take place, QA Tester writes automated tests and each developer & designer works on several parts of the game independently, which eventually gets compiled and integrated on a whole for post-processing.

The below flow diagram represents how our team takes over a project from understanding the client's expectations to designing rough sketches of it, developing LODs based on the target platform, and delivering updates periodically to the clients for feedback and revision.

The team with a Client relationship manager and Strategic Advisor assigned for each project would make sure the project is on track and it aligns with the target market expectation, having periodic meetings with the client showcasing updates, and having all the dependencies from the Client resolved from time to time.

Milestones & Timeframe

Our team based on the client's requirements does market research and proposes the project to be segregated into several phases (based on the size of the project) and milestone documents for each phase and sprint are shared upfront with the tentative dates.

- There'll be a weekly meeting scheduled every Friday to discuss the current progress & showcasing the work developed by our team to the Client for revision. But, Anytime there can be communication carried over between the development team & the client, through the platforms mentioned below.
- The communication between the client & the development team can be carried out through Slack or Discord, abiding with the client's convenience & the meetings can be taken forward through Zoom Meetings.
- The task management system we would be using is ClickUp.

WHAT MAKES US WORTH A TRY?

What if you're not sure to give us a try?

Breaking the conventional, we can start developing the project with no agreements signed, if you're happy with our work for the first sprint (around 1-2 weeks) we can sign to proceed further to deliver what we promised, if you're not happy with us, you can just walk away with no compensation.

What differentiates us from the rest?

- Unlike conventional companies/agencies, & teams, we develop applications for startups & companies, only if we believe in the idea, that it adds value. So, we could work for your business to thrive.
- Our team doesn't stop their responsibilities just by developing and delivering the product, we have an aspiring team, proposing several recommendations and suggestions based on the market research, saving time and resources.
